 - gets 100gp for it
 - hears some rumors while carousing there
 - loose lip fishmonger

“ Some old codger down at the market’s been shouting about ‘the merging of worlds’ and ‘the return of the dead.’ Most folks think he’s mad, but he’s been talking about shadows coming alive and a 'second Sundering.' Creepy, if you ask me. The Watch gave him a good boot, but he keeps coming back.

- looks drunk

“ So, my cousin's a rat-catcher, right? He found these weird symbols carved into the sewer walls, down near the Trades Ward. He's seen a lot down there, but nothing like this. Said they glow faintly, like they're alive. He swears he saw someone in a hood watching him from the dark, but when he turned around, they were gone.

- Nybarg

- this is apparently a quite common request
- Father Alaric guides Calcine to the chapel
 - leaves after asking if she needs help
 - Calcine takes out of her pocket a holy symbol
 - a crown of thorn
 - after pricking her finger on it she places it on the altar
 - she sits in seiza
 - she starts by apologizing with her stubbornness with admitting his help
 - she thanks him for helping her through abilities other than hers to keep others well
 - after that she meditates on all these experiences
 - Calcine stands up and bows before picking up the Symbol
 - Calcine places the symbol on her coat instead of in a pocket
 - Calcine pricks her finger placing it
 - the time seem to stop as the blood drop

“ Calcine sees spectral chains, forged of shadows, wrapped around the city of Waterdeep. These chains pulse with a dark energy, and with each pulse, the city’s lights flicker as if struggling to hold back encroaching darkness. These chains lead toward a rift—a tear in reality—through which Calcine can see glimpses of the Shadowfell, a realm of gloom and decay. Dark figures, robed in shadows, tug at the chains, trying to widen the rift. Calcine senses the presence of the cultists and hears a voice that whispers, “A world of suffering, endless and unyielding, if the veil falls.”

- the time resumes
- 2 small white mouses stare at Calcine intelligently

 - a long time ago the planes were one thanks to a dirge
 - 3 gods separated it for the benefit of mortals
 - Sune

- Ilmater
- Mystra
- everyone sits at the table
- Laeral puts a book on the table
 - it is what she was fidgeting with earlier

“Thank you all for answering the call. The weight of these times is heavy, but we do not carry it alone. The city of Waterdeep, the heart of the Sword Coast, stands at the precipice of a threat that, if allowed to grow unchecked, could unravel not just the fabric of our city but the very world itself. You’ve all heard whispers, no doubt. Whispers of strange happenings, of unseen hands moving within the shadows of our streets. But this threat is far more insidious than mere rumors—it is the resurgence of a cult whose intentions were believed to be long buried in history.

She pauses, her fingers briefly brushing the tome that sits before her on the table—the very book that Xanathar once feared. Its presence seems to add weight to the air around them.

The cult, as we have learned, is not only working to open portals to the Shadowfell, a plane of eternal twilight and despair, but they seek a far more disastrous end: another Sundering. If they succeed, if they manage to bridge the divide between Toril and Aebir, the consequences will be catastrophic. The worlds will collide, their forces becoming intertwined in a collision of magic and madness, one that we may not survive.

For some of you, this may sound like the ravings of the most desperate of scholars, but I assure you, the evidence is irrefutable. The tome before me—an artifact tied to the cult’s efforts—was brought into my possession under strange and disturbing circumstances. It was given to me by none other than Xanathar, the Beholder, who found himself so terrorized by it that he sought my counsel. That creature does not fear easily. Yet, here we stand, facing something that fills even the most powerful of us with dread.

But we are not here simply to speak of fear—we are here to act. The cult is not only operating within the shadows of Waterdeep but has gained footholds across the Sword Coast, perhaps even beyond. Their influence is subtle, their reach wide, and they will not hesitate to strike when we least expect it. I have called you here not as allies of convenience, but as guardians of this city, of this world. I know that each of you has been chosen for your unique skills and strengths. Together, we will fight this threat on every front, be it through covert sabotage, magical investigation, or open battle. We will unearth their secrets and stop their machinations before the worlds collide and all is lost. We are at a crossroads. And it is up to us, to all of us, to choose the path of light, even in the deepest shadows. This book and the fragments of knowledge it contains are only the beginning. We must work together, act swiftly, and strike at the heart of the cult. This will not be an easy fight, but it is one we cannot afford to lose. I trust you understand the gravity of this task. And I trust that you will do everything in your power to see it through. We begin now, and we do so together. The future of Waterdeep, the Sword Coast, and perhaps all of Faerûn rests in our hands.

- o Laeral points at the book on the table before continuing

“ Some years ago, long before the cult's schemes began to unravel, I had an encounter that still chills me. You all know of Kureiskai, the so-called Eye, a beholder who controls much of the city's underbelly. For all his ambitions, Xanathar is not a creature prone to fear; indeed, I have seen him laugh in the face of death itself. Yet one night, one of his agents approached me, trembling and pale. He bore a message from his master, one so strange that I dismissed it as another of Kureiska's manipulations. But then came the tome.

According to this agent, this book had manifested in Kureiskai's lair, summoned forth in the midst of a dream—or perhaps a nightmare. Xanathar saw it first as a vision: an endless tide of shadows consuming his treasure vault, drowning his greatest desires in darkness. He awoke to find the book in his grasp, and for the first time in his life, he was terrified. He sought to rid himself of it, yet every time he discarded it, the tome would reappear. He knew it held power, yet he dared not open it, for fear of the madness it might unleash.

Kureiska's fear drove him to an act of desperation: to seek my aid. I immediately felt its power—a tether to the Shadowfell, whispering of a convergence between realms. Yet when I opened the book its pages were blank.

Overtime we found that the book itself would only show its text when it was absorbed energy from object that held the latent energy of the shadowfell, however that was fleeting as these objects were quickly consumed.

- o Laeral asks what everyone saw in the shadowfell
 - o Vincent mentions the adventures the party had in the shadowfell
 - o bodaks and undeads
 - o rift to the fiend demiplane
 - o Calcine mentions the vision

- Quick mentions what happened on his side
 - captured by cultists
 - they babbled thinking he was a harmless dumb bird
 - looking for rifts
 - seeking eternal dust
 - they want portals in more than Waterdeep
 - they are using the city as a key to open the veil
 - they seek a sundering like the one that happened in Elthurel
 - grow bolder every day
- Jezz feels her axe pulling her to the book Laeral showed
 - Jezz removes her the axe from her back and places it on the table
 - it starts moving suddenly towards the book
 - Jezz catches it before it flies away
 - the shards only worked temporarily

“ you owe me a new axe

- Jezz lets it go
- the axe floats above the book
 - shadowy tendrils of ichors are pulled from the axe
 - the pages start to flicker with stuff written in it
- Jezz hears in her mind

“ When the veil between planes shatters, the echoes of woe shall resound. Three worlds, once severed, shall sing as one, Bound by grief, shadow, and longing. In the shadow of the Weave’s unmaking, The sundering hymn shall rise again, A lament to weave the dying stars together. To call forth the union of realms, Seek the triad of lost sorrows: The Wound, the Heart, the Mirror. One must bleed. One must yearn. One must reflect. Through pain and passion, the path shall open. Through despair and devotion, the Shadowborn shall rise.

- this is also what is transcribed in the book
- this is a prescription of what the cultists want to do
- fill interactions later
- Jezz tries to pull the axe back after a while
 - the axe recoils
 - Jezz gets her maximum hp reduced by 24
